

Marco Vercelli

Passionate about art and culture, after graduating in Humanistic studies, my desire to translate my passion for art into functional, contemporary elements aimed at enhancing the individual led me to pursue Fashion Design Degree at IED in Milan, where I graduated with honors with a thesis focused on the concept of "Liquid Modernity."

I love the research approach aimed at creating a unique artistic and communicative dimension, which I am passionate about translating into garments through the choice of evocative and effective fabrics and materials that convey emotions without ever losing sight of functionality, contemporaneity, and sustainability.

My approach to each project is based on meticulous analysis and in-depth research, creativity, and a contemporary vision, always with a keen eye on the heritage of a brand.

I am now eager to put myself to the test as a Fashion Designer in stimulating projects within a Style department; I am also interested in research and development roles within the Product department of the fashion sector, where I can put my acquired skills to use and develop new ones with an approach that is always passionate and curious.
